Copying policy

Some original documents and items may not be able to be photocopied or digitised for conservation reasons. If we are unable to photocopy an item for you, we may be able to take digital images of the document at a cost of £20 per hour. This will depend on the type and condition of the original document and whether special handling and photography techniques are required.

When reproducing images from the REME Museum you should credit the Museum using the phrase: "By permission of the REME Museum". You must also include the REME Museum Object or Reference Number in the credit, for example: By permission of the REME Museum A:2014.0024.01

Material in copyright

All reproduction is subject to copyright. A declaration will need to be provided for works in copyright, to state that copies are supplied for personal and research purposes only, and are not for onward sale or publication.

If you want to reproduce the images you've ordered from us, for example in a publication or broadcast, you will have to request permission from the Museum. You may also have to clear permission with the rights holder of the material you want to reproduce, for in-copyright works

Before we can produce your copies, please complete a copying services order form, including the copyright declaration if relevant.
